REPEAL the

SEPARATE
CHURCH & STATE

How long more must we wait? For years Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael have been delaying dealing with the issue of abortion. They have no problem forcing women to go to Britain to protect their hypocrisy.

But when the Citizens' Assembly finally came up with a proposal that women should be allowed an abortion for 'socio-economic' reasons, the whole political class shouted 'too radical;'

Even Sinn Féin – which calls itself left wing – thought this was too much and wants to limit abortion to very specific and restrictive situations.

People Before Profit disagree.

We want a legal guarantee that women can have free and legal abortions – if they choose to.

(We also want the state to provide accessible childcare so that women can have a genuine choice on whether or not to have a child.)

The first step is to remove the 8th Amendment from the constitution. This was pushed through by a Catholic fundamentalist movement who wanted to stop future generations making their own decisions on morality.
